Show HN: Easy-to-use SIP Registrar, with Perfect Forward Secrecy - mybrighter ====== mybrighter Hi HN, I'm happy to be part of the discussion around PFS as one of our customers has been asking for this. We are a service which allows small, medium, and large companies to buy their own SIP or IAX Registrar, and provide their own back-office. We were trying to build a SIP Registrar for small companies, but now we're building one for larger companies as well. We've been building this for 3 years, and we are currently in Beta and going through the process of getting our business license and other things (e.g. dealing with the price and fees). We really want to see if this can be a solution for you guys. Any questions or feedback, just ask me. Q: PowerShell - if function and switch In PowerShell, is there a way to create something like this (the -Cost switch is not working)? if function -Cost [$cost = "2.00"} I know that you can do if(function){ #do stuff } And you can do a switch on the function itself. But is there a way to do this with a nested if? A: Yes, you can do the following: if (function -Test -Cost { '2.00' } { '3.00' }) However, you need to note that your case statements need to be comma-separated. News WESTJORDAN: "Allegedly", By Michael R. Gordon, New York Times, March 21st, 2020 Thousands of American cars are recalled every year because of defects. But in the case of Donald J. Trump's personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, the recall appears to be vastly more extensive than it should be. The Trump lawyer was a passenger in a vehicle involved in a fatal accident in Westchester County, N.Y., in December, according to the police and news reports. Five months later, on Feb. 13, 2020, Mr. Giuliani was in another crash, in his home state of New York. At that time 82157476af
